

Expanding enrolments

By 1884 overcrowding was intense and so a new Boys School was built on the site of the current Junior School and the girls and infants thankfully took over their room. A large fence was built down the centre of the playground thus keeping boys and girls separate. However further additions were necessary in the Girls' section by 1892 and again in 1924. This photo shows the original school in 1926 with the students assembled outside.

The Boys In 1897

The boy marked with a X is Walter Adey born in 1887, whose daughter Carol, later became a student and then a teacher at the school herself.
